'ESSENTIALS' FOR DEBT AGREEMENT BY CHAMBERLAIN

Two New Essentials Are Laid Down by English Chancellor

AT DINNER IN LEEDS

Hails Proposed Washington Discussion As Big Opportunity

LEEDS, England, Jan. 25.—Two "essentials" for a new debt agreement with the United States, were laid down by Chancellor of the Exchequer, Chamberlain as he addressed the annual dinner of the Leeds Chamber of Commerce. These are that the settlement must be final, and that it must not involve resumption of German reparations.

Chamberlain asserted that Britain would participate gladly in debt discussions with the United States. His speech was the first public pronouncement since the announcement in Washington last week that the Roosevelt Administration would be willing to consider the debt question with Britain early in March.

In an important pronouncement of the British viewpoint on the whole tangle of intergovernmental debts Mr. Chamberlain hailed the proposed Washington discussion as an opportunity for settlement of one of the world's most pressing problems. He declared the British war-debt policy was well known, for it had been held by successive British Governments since the World War.

"We believe the total cancellation of war debts and reparations would be the best thing that could happen to the world as a whole," he said, "but if that is going further than American opinion is yet prepared to accept, we shall gladly discuss with our American friends, whenever they are ready to receive our representatives, the lines on which agreement can be reached, bearing in mind two things which seem to us essential:

"First, that the settlement to be reached must be the final settlement, and, secondly, that it must be one which will not involve resumption of the claim on Germany for reparations which it was the object of the Lausanne settlement last year to end.

Mr. Chamberlain did not mention the gold standard or the possibility of Britain's return to it save in one brief reference to the possibility of nations improving their trade balance by depreciating currency.

However, he analyzed most other aspects of the economic depression and, apparently speaking over the heads of the canny Yorkshire business men around him, wanted to engage in a heart-to-heart talk with "American farmers of the Middle West."

From the Chancellor's speech, Leeds business men might have obtained the impression that only Middle West farmers of the United States stood in the way of carrying out the British policy of all-around cancellation of the war debts. Elsewhere in his speech he spoke of "an important and enlightened section of opinion in the United States which is not so far from our own point of view."

Dishes and Window Panes Broken by Blasts; Replaced

Residents of the vicinity of Neshaminy Falls and Trexore are complaining. They don't like the idea of the sudden blasts which so frequently make them jump a few feet, and have dishes or window panes broken in the bargain.

The blasts sometime occur late at night after some of the folks have retired, then again the sudden tremors with the accompanying "boom" come during the busy mid-day hours.

Dishes are said to jump from shelves, and window panes crack, and walls groan.

All of the excitement is caused by the blasting for the new super-highway which is to be parallel with the Lincoln highway, and which is to run from Roosevelt Boulevard to Yardley. Residents have begun to complain. But each dish that breaks, each window that cracks, is replaced by the contractors. The work must go on.

The workmen explain they have struck a rock-formation which makes it difficult to proceed. The fog increases the concussion, they say. They must excavate to a depth of 45 feet. Each blast shakes loose about 3,000 tons of the stubborn rock.

They replace the dishes, but the residents don't like the blasting.

GUNS BLAZE IN GANGLAND

Chicago, Ill., Jan. 25.—Guns blazed here today in an apparent effort to wipe out the remaining first aids of Al Capone's diminishing underworld empire and the former gang czar's own sister and public enemies No. 1 and No. 2, narrowly escaped death. Mrs. Nafalda Naritote, Capone's sister, with her baby in her arms, accompanied by her husband, John J. Naritote, and her brother, Frank Diamond, long one of Al's trusted lieutenants, were targets for a fusillade of bullets from a passing car. They escaped miraculously by dropping flat on the ground as the assassins' barrage opened.

In the second outbreak, five shots were fired through the windows of Matty Quail's saloon where, it was said, Murray Humphreys, a public enemy No. 1 and William (Three-Fingered Jack) White, public enemy No. 2, were in deep conference. Humphreys and White were given this ranking among Chicago's public enemies in a recent risk campaign by Detective Chief Schoemaker as a drive was started at the request of Mayor Cermak to clear out hoodlums before the world's fair opens. Both Humphreys and White were close aids of Capone before the "big shot" was carted off to Atlanta Penitentiary by the Federal Government on an income tax dodging charge.

The attack on Capone's sister's party is believed to have been intended for Diamond who played an important role in the former underworld czar's operations here.

CHECK OPERATIONS

Tokyo, Japan, Jan. 25.—Chinese military operations in Jehol Province had been checked by Japanese air raids, the war office announced today.

"AKRON" AT PHILA.

Philadelphia, Jan. 25.—The Navy's dirigible, the "Akron," mightiest in the world, floated lazily over Philadelphia today to boost the local "renovize" campaign, but not before it had given hundreds of residents in adjoining New Jersey and Pennsylvania towns a real scare. The "Akron" left her hangar at Lakehurst, N. J., at 9 o'clock this morning enroute to Philadelphia. As she hovered over New Jersey, residents became alarmed when they noticed several of the giant's motors were idle and the craft drifting southward at an extremely low altitude. Scores ran to their homes to telephone officials at Lakehurst that the craft was in danger. Navy officials explained it with a laugh. "The crew were just killing a little time," they explained. "They weren't due in Philadelphia until 10 o'clock and it takes much less than an hour to make the trip so they just drifted along with the air current for a while."

SEEK ARMED BANDITS; STOLE LOADED TRUCK

Driver Held Up Near Hatboro; Merchandise Valued at $2,000

DRIVEN TO PRINCETON

Authorities are seeking four armed robbers who yesterday held up a truck driver on the Old York Road, between Hatboro and Hartsville, and drove away with the truck loaded with merchandise valued at $2,000.

The driver, Bernard McNichol, 23, 19th and Cayuga, Phila., was forced into an automobile with two of the robbers while the other two drove away with the truck. He was driven to near Princeton Junction.

McNichol was enroute from Philadelphia to Scranton when the robbers pulled up beside his truck in a sedan and forced him to alight. He said he thought they were state highway patrolmen.

"I was driving along the Old York Road, somewhere near Hartsville, I believe," McNichol said. "A Buick sedan drove up along side my truck. I thought the four fellows that got out were cops. They ordered me to get out of the truck and two of them pushed me in the sedan and the other two jumped on my truck and drove away. I was told to get down on the floor in the back of the sedan and keep still. The next thing I knew I was unloaded at a place near Princeton Junction and the fellows beat it."

When released McNichol telephoned Trenton police and was taken to Doylestown to make a report to State police there.

He is employed by the Chester P. Davis Trucking Co., Scranton, and said he has been making about three trips weekly between Phila. and Scranton. The truck was loaded with cigarettes, cheese, salad dressing and candy.

As Mills Attacked Inflation

Secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills (left) is shown as he argued before the House Banking and Currency Committee on the Goldsboro Inflation Bill. Secretary Mills offered a program for economic recovery on the basis of a balanced budget. He attacked direct monetary inflation and warned against the manipulation of currency. ### THIS CALLS FOR A BIG "ME-O-O"

(By the Stroller)

The "pussies" are out. Don't get the wrong idea; this really is news—for I mean the pussy-willows.

Those fluffy little "blossoms" which make their appearance in the Spring have been fooled by the warm weather, like so many people have, and think Spring has really arrived. They have been noticed on several trees hereabouts.

But you and I will vouch that these "pussies" will hide heads to keep warm ere long, and there probably wait several weeks before deciding to come forth once more.

Officer of Keene Home Board Dies in Philadelphia

Eli Kirk Price, well-known Philadelphia, who died at his home in that city yesterday, was secretary and treasurer of the board of managers of the Keene Home, here.

The deceased was likewise most active in the affairs of St. James's Protestant Episcopal Church, 22nd and Walnut streets, Philadelphia, a member of the Art Jury, president of the Pennsylvania Museum and School of Industrial Art, and winner of the Philadelphia award in 1929. Mr. Price was taken ill in the Park Commissioner's office, City Hall, yesterday, and collapsed at 1.30 p. m. as he was about to leave for home. He was taken to his residence, where death occurred.

This deceased member of an old Pennsylvania family was known to several Bristolians in his capacity of secretary-treasurer of the Keene Home board, which home was founded here many years ago for "aged gentlemen," and which structure contains many valuable antiques.

FATHER OF EIGHTEEN MEETS SUDDEN DEATH

Cataldo Andricola, 59, Collapses While Digging at King Farms

HURRIED TO HOSPITAL

A father of 18 children, Cataldo Andricola, died suddenly late yesterday afternoon after collapsing while engaged in digging a trench at the King Farms, Penns Manor, where he was employed.

At the time of Andricola's fatal illness he and three other men were digging at the King Farm, where Andricola had been employed for the past three years. The workmen hurried to Andricola's assistance and had him removed to St. Francis' Hospital, Trenton, N. J., where he was pronounced dead upon arrival. Death was attributed to a heart attack.

Andricola, who was a native of Italy, together with his family lived in a tenant house on the farm. He was the father of 18 children, most of whom are grown.

The body was ordered removed by Coroner Frank K. Grove, Trenton, N. J., to a Trenton morgue, where County Physician Charles H. Mitchell examined it.

Funeral will be held in Philadelphia to which city the body is to be forwarded.

CARDS TOMORROW

BRISTOL HIGH GAINS LOWER END LEAGUE LEAD

Over 600 Fans View Thrilling Spectacle; Morrisville Loses, 25 to 24

(By Oscar Corn)

Over 600 rabid fans viewed a thrilling spectacle last night as the mighty stragglers of Bristol High met and conquered Morrisville High bull-dog five, 25 to 24, in one of the most sensational tournaments ever witnessed on the local high school court. This victory makes the cardinal and gray quintet the undisputed leaders of the Lower Bucks County League, with a percentage of 100.

The opening stanza saw Bristol get under way when Cahall succeeded in snaring the initial double-decker, constantly maintaining this lead and consistently endeavoring to widen it. The end of the first half saw the stragglers leading by the score of 14 to 10.

The third quarter opened with a bang. Morrisville, coming back strong, looped the cords four times in succession to gain a four-point lead. Scoring slowly, the mighty cardinal and gray five kept within hailing distance of the visitors. In the last quarter Coach Dougherty's proteges, tired of being led, in a fast and furious offensive attack, succeeded in tying the score and then grabbing the lead, 24 to 22.

Scullin, the Morrisville captain as star, having been held down all night, grabbed a pass and made a beautiful shot to tie the score, just as the gun ended the game, 24 to 24.

A very exciting three-minute extra period ensued. Both teams missed many shots, and the playing was rough.

With forty seconds to go, Cahall was fouled. He converted this point and gave Bristol the lead, and game.

Bristol High must attribute this victory to the smoothness of the team's defense and offense. The team as a whole played a very fine game and surely deserved to win.

Brown was high scorer for Bristol, while Klienfelter scored most for Morrisville.

The Cardinal and Gray felines won their fourth straight game of the season, last night, when they smashed through the Morrisville sextet for a close victory of 19 to 18. The localites, showing a fine fighting spirit and perseverance, downed Morrisville in a game packed with thrills.

The score was close throughout the entire game, and never was the leading team more than two points ahead.

The Bristol passing attack was very good, as was the shooting. The excellent guarding of Faber and Mannherz is to be commented upon, as (Continued on Page 4)

Travel Club Will Hear More of Old Bristol Homes

Guest day will be observed by Bristol Travel Club at its home on Cedar street Friday afternoon, at which time Doron Green will speak upon "Old Bristol Homes," a continuation of a talk before the local club women during last season's tour.

Mrs. Griffith L. Williams will be in charge of the program; and hostesses will be Mrs. Emil Metzger and Mrs. Charles Peet. A tea and social hour will also be a feature of the afternoon.

It is reported by Mrs. Walter Fagan, chairman of the charity relief committee, that there is great need for clothing for men, women and children. Members of the club are requested to take to Friday's meeting any clothing which is in good condition, and for which they no longer have need. The articles will be distributed among the needy.

WOODWARD OFFERS AMENDMENT; LINK FOR FIVE COUNTIES

Would Join Philadelphia and the Adjoining Bailiwicks

START PASSING BILLS

Would Take Place of Five Common Pleas Courts

HARRISBURG, Jan. 25.—Senator George Woodward, Germantown, introduced yesterday an amendment to the state constitution to combine Philadelphia, Bucks, Montgomery, Delaware and Chester counties in a single judicial district.

The measure provides for one Common Pleas Court, which would have jurisdiction over the five counties, in place of the five Common Pleas Courts in Philadelphia, and separate courts in each of the other counties. It is planned that all judges in commission at the time of the proposed change would serve in the merged court.

Senator Woodward also introduced a bill to exempt theatre curtains and other theatrical "property" used as scenery, from execution for rent.

The Reed bill to reduce the pay of traveling Judges passed the Senate finally by vote of 48 to 1.

Senator Samuel W. Salus, Philadelphia, cast the only vote of opposition. There was no debate on the measure which cuts the pay of Judges from $30 to $15 for each day they serve in courts outside their districts.

The Senate advanced on second reading the McClure joint resolution continuing the investigation of the Public Service Commission which a Senate committee has been conducting since last summer. Advancement today permits final Senate action on the resolution tomorrow.

The House passed finally its first bill of the session. The measure, sponsored by Representative Baker, Union, would have the Highway Department and counties divide the cost of property damages resulting from road improvements.

A bill by Senator McClure, Delaware county, which has been passed by the Senate, would make the State pay the entire cost of property damages.

The House adopted the Fay Senate resolution for a legislative study of budget needs for the 1933-35 biennium. Three Senators and three Representatives are to constitute the committee, which is given power to hold hearings.

Officers and directors of building and loan associations would be required to own at least five shares of stock in the association by a bill which Representative Schwartz, Philadelphia, introduced. This stock must be kept free of encumbrances at all times, the bill provides.

Representative Andrews, Cambria, introduced a bill reducing the interest charged on loans by personal finance companies. The rate would be cut from 3½ to 1½ per cent a month.

The House adopted the resolution of Representative Blumberg, Philadelphia, requesting Governor Pinchot to furnish the General Assembly data on the money and expenditure of loans received from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Governor Pinchot would be asked to supply the data by February 15 for information of the special House committee authorized to draft an unemployment relief program.

This committee is to hold its first session today.

Missing Girl Gives Self Up to New Hope Burgess

NEW HOPE, Jan. 25.—A Raubsville girl, who had been missing from her home since January 17th, has been located in this borough. She is Irene Allen, 14. The girl has been returned to her parents by Northampton County Detective H. J. Menikheim.

Menikheim was told by the girl that she and Helen Moser, 17, of Easton R. D., ran away from home last week, went to Philadelphia and then Trenton. There they separated, the girl states, and the Allen girl came here, where she gave herself up to Chief Burgess John A. Flood.

BARBAROUS GEORGIA

Georgia is putting herself in for a lot of unpleasant publicity these days. Her name is making the front pages and editorial columns of newspapers from coast to coast but that fact does not warm the cockles of her go-getters because it is not the sort of publicity which attracts business and new residents.

A book and a motion picture about her prison chain gangs were so convincing that the world beyond her state lines compares her penal system with the torture chambers of medieval times and public opinion prevailed upon the governors of two states not to send escaped prisoners back to the Georgia chain gang. Georgia peaches and subdivisions have been forgotten for the time being.

Hot upon the heels of this damaging advertising comes the incident of a judge sentencing a 19-year-old Negro to prison for 18 years on the charge that he attempted to incite insurrection by carrying a piece of communist literature in his pocket. His crime consisted of wilful intent, the ancient offense of imagining the king's death. Another flare-back to medievalism.

One suspects that the judge who imposed this savage penalty made more communists by that single act than the Negro and his literature could convert in a life time, and for inciting insurrection there is nothing more effective than a martyr or two.

No doubt the judge acted in all sincerity and exercised his best judgment. But like so many others with the best of intentions he does not comprehend that revolutions and insurrections come from within the people, not as the fruits of propaganda and agitation.

GROUNDHOG'S JOB

One fears that Bre'r Groundhog will have a lot of sympathy for President Hoover and some other politicians after February 2. He is due to learn that this is a time when promises are hard to keep.

Normally Prophet Groundhog can see 's shadow or not see it and know his prediction of six more weeks of winter or an early spring will come to pass as per schedule in some sections of this great but, at this moment, climatically uncertain land. But all weather predictions fail this year. Even nature missed bets she never lost before.

When it snows in Southern California and the trees blossom in Pennsylvania in January. Forecaster Groundhog, if he is as wise as he professes, will stay in his hole on February 2nd and let winter and spring fight it out themselves. Any attempt at forecasting this year will be at the risk of his reputation.

Should the groundhog have more winter under his shadow let him rush it along before the blossoming fruit trees, in regions where May is the normal budding season, bring forth buds to have them nipped by pursuing freezes and frosts.

These are perilous days for goosechone prophets and almanac compilers. They will be a long time explaining their "misses by a mile" in the winter of 1932-33.

When a man can't get a grip on himself someone else can.

It takes all kinds of people to make a world, so almost anyone should be able to fit in somewhere.

TRICKS of MAGIC EXPLAINED by Will Lindhorst

HOW TO MAKE A PEG JUMP FROM ONE HOLE TO ANOTHER

The secret of this trick lies in the way the holes are placed in the pencil. Two holes are drilled through the pencil, and two deep indentations resembling holes are made, one on each side, making what appears to be three holes in the pencil. Each of the indentations is placed at opposite ends of the two holes as shown in the above drawing. Make a small peg, place it in hole number two, twist the pencil so the other side comes on top and the peg will have jumped to hole number one. The same can be done with holes number two and three. The illusion is more effective if the pencil is twisted quickly.

THE CHALLENGE OF LOVE by WARWICK DEEPIING

CHAPTER FIFTY-TWO

John Wolfe's coming was the coming of the general in command. Hospital and commissariat staffs stared more than seemed absolutely necessary. Jess was under fire, and was unconscious of the fact, her eyes looking towards Ursula Brandon, who was waiting for them by the terrace steps.

"I could not keep away, Mrs. Brandon; I heard you wanted help."

Ursula smiled at Jess, studying her as she smiled. It was the attitude of the woman towards the girl.

"That is the spirit we want. Will you go over and help the others to cut out sheets?"

"I'll do anything you ask me to."

"That's splendid."

Jess found herself kneeling under one of the cedars, and snipping away at a bale of calico with a pair of bright new scissors. But her eyes wandered away towards John Wolfe. He was standing talking to Ursula Brandon where the steps led up from the lawn to the terrace. The massed colours of the well-watered flowers in the borders raised a broad background of rose and of gold. Beyond stood the warm, red-walled house, mellow, stately, suggesting aloofness and some awe to Jess's eyes.

They were talking like intimate friends—those two, Ursula Brandon showed animation, fire, reflecting the glow of the man's virility. Jess had a sudden, queer, lost feeling at the heart. She sat back on her heels, watching, forgetting her scissors and the roll of white stuff before her. She discovered the desire that John Wolfe should leave Mrs. Ursula Brandon and come and talk to her, even if only for a moment.

Presently he came. Jess knelt there at his feet, not looking up, her dark lashes making shadows on her cheeks, her scissors busy.

"When are we to go to the hospital, John?"

"The hospital isn't in being yet."

"Has she done all this?"

"Mrs. Brandon? Yes, I never came across anyone with a better head for organization. She has thought of everything down to feeding-cups and safety pins. I must say I was astonished. To look at her you would not think such a woman would trouble."

Jess's head remained bowed.

A cynic could have amused himself by walking about Navestock and watching the remarkable unanimity with which the people of the upper middle-class decided that they needed a change of air. The "White Hart" coach and all the wagons in the town were kept busy, carrying the fugitives to Warrington station. The Wilks family was one of the first to leave, the young ladies pressing scented handkerchiefs to their noses, and old Wilks, the squirrel, nibbling at the daily paper. Miss Perfrement was borne off, scattering "heart attacks" like handbills along the road. The Turrells went to Scotland. Johnson, the wine merchant, departed for Yarmouth, taking his daughters and his parrot with him, the bird perched in its cage on the top of the cab, shouting "Monte, Monte" outside Dr. Threadgold's windows.

Should the groundhog have more winter under his shadow let him rush it along before the blossoming fruit trees, in regions where May is the normal budding season, bring forth buds to have them nipped by pursuing freezes and frosts.

These are perilous days for goosechone prophets and almanac compilers. They will be a long time explaining their "misses by a mile" in the winter of 1932-33.

When a man can't get a grip on himself someone else can.

It takes all kinds of people to make a world, so almost anyone should be able to fit in somewhere.

him early in August, Mr. Talbot Tweedy being a hiring with "nerves." He smiled for a while on people with his yellow teeth, stumbled over doormats, readjusted his pince-nez that were always slipping, and then vanished out of Navestock. Threadgold had begun to be bewildered. His bewilderment increased as the work thickened, but he continued to go bowling about in his carriage and popping in and out of doors. A man's intellect may fail him; but his manner may survive. Threadgold's manner was the product of years of affable pomposity. It took command of him in the crisis, carried him about, spoke for him, kept him moving. Threadgold was dazed, but his manner went on working, and persisted in uttering the same pompous platitudes.

The people in the river alleys were brutally ignorant and ignorantly stubborn. The stultifying stupidity of the town threatened Wolfe's hospital scheme from the very first. The marquees and tents were pitched, the little improvised beds ready, the volunteers at their posts. The difficulty lay in getting the sick children. Stupid affection, sheer obstinacy, ignorant prejudice made many of the cottagers refuse to let the youngsters be taken away.

"You be wanting to cut 'em about, I know ye."

That was what one poor woman threw in John Wolfe's face.

Compassion made him patient. He and Robert Flemming went from house to house, arguing, pleading, scolding. Wolfe began to grow fierce with some of the fools. Many of them would not let the children go, and would not feed them properly when they kept them. With the co-operation of some of the farmers, Wolfe had arranged to have fresh country milk distributed for the use of the sick. It was imperative that those who were ill should have no solid food. And again and again Wolfe caught them feeding the youngsters on such stuff as bacon and stewed cabbage.

Jess Brandon was watching Jess tending a sick little boy in the marquee hospital.

"I think she is about the best nurse I have," Ursula told Dr. Wolfe.

"Plenty of pluck. I suppose she eats and sleeps properly?"

"Yes, I see to that; I am very imperious."

"We should never have been able to manage this without you."

Wolfe saw Jess alone for a few minutes before he left.

"All right, Jess?"

"Yes, quite."

"Absolutely sure?"

"Shall I put my tongue out, John?"

He flipped her cheek.

"Be careful."

"Oh, I am very careful. It is just splendid here, and I get on so well with the children. Aren't those people in Navestock wretches?"

"Who?"

"The ignorant wretches who won't let their sick children be brought out here. I should like to go through Navestock with a whip."

Perhaps nothing shocked Navestock more than the deaths of old Hubbard, and Johnson, the butcher. For years these men had been part of the intimate life of the town; old Hubbard, with his round, lard-coloured, mildly owl-wise face; Johnson, the beef-red bully, smacking bellowing with laughter. Their deaths were like the taking down of famous tavern signs. Hubbard died in his sleep; Johnson in the full wakefulness of blasphemous terror. Robert Flemming had looked grey and tired when he had come away from Johnson's bedside.

"That chap Wolfe will be pleased, damn him. I don't care. I've led a straight life, and I ain't been stinky. What have I got to die for, what have I got to die for? I don't want to go!"

Then whimpering, curses against Threadgold—"old mutton head"—"blasted, bodgering fool!"

Then, too, these slow-thinking and patient people began to realize that this pest might not have struck Navestock so fiercely, had the landlords chosen to do what the doctors had advised. Money, yes! It would have cost a deal of money! The talk in the ale-houses and at the doorways became cynical and bitter.

September brought rain. Dr. Wolfe, riding back over Tarring Moor with a storm racing up, saw Ursula Brandon's hospital white as newly-washed linen spread out on a bank to dry. The sunlight shone on it, but even as Wolfe watched, the edge of a storm cloud covered the sun. A great hand might have flung a dark net over Navestock. The glamour went. A wind came over the moor. Rain began to fall.

The drops were rattling on the flapping canvas of the marquees and tents before Wolfe reached the hospital. Most of the children were asleep. In the big marquee two nurses were talking together in whispers.

"How are things getting on?"

"Very well in here, doctor. Miss Mascall is with Jennie Sanders in No. 3 tent."

The two nurses looked at each other, questioning.

"I don't think she is quite herself, doctor."

"Oh!"

"Of course she pretends. But three days ago—"

Wolfe went striding round the tent pegs with a word of thanks to the nurses. In No. 3 Jess was bending over a bed and settling an ice-bag against the shaven head of a child of seven. There was a listlessness about her movements, an apathy that could not be concealed.

Wolfe came to the doorway in time to see Jess step back from the bed with a little tragic gesture.

"Oh, bother my head."

Then she turned and saw him. A kind of guilty flush went over her face, for there was something in John Wolfe's eyes that frightened her.

"Why, John! Do come and look; I think Jennie is going to pull through."

He came into the tent, studying her with the searching glance of a man who was afraid to see that for which he looked.

"You're not well, Jess."

The sparkle had gone out of her. "It is only a headache. I don't mind so long as the child pulls through. Come and look at her, John."

Wolfe ignored the child on the bed. He went to Jess, and stood over her, intent almost to fierceness.

"Give me your hand. You have felt like this for some days?"

"Yes, John."

"Why didn't you tell me?"

"I didn't want to bother. Besides—"

"Jess, that wasn't fair, dear. Your hand is hot; you're feverish."

PEANUTS

LET'S take an imaginary trip to the South, the land of sunshine and peanuts. I've been there in the fall of the year when the coloring of the leaves is simply magnificent and everyone around the "peanut towns" is busy with the peanut harvest.

Peanuts are an important crop down South—North Carolina, Georgia, Virginia, Alabama, Texas and Florida are all large producers of peanuts. About a third of the peanut crop is sold in the shell, roasted. The rest of the crop goes to factories where it is worked up into peanut butter, peanut oil, candy and cookies. And, of course, part of the crop is French fried in hot oil, to make salted peanuts.

The word "goober" is the African name for peanuts, and Africa is still one of the great peanut countries; China is another. And do you know that Marseilles, France, has the biggest wholesale market for peanuts? I've been there, and I've seen thousands of tons of peanuts pressed for salad oil. But let's not get away from the Southland. If you were in one of the "peanut towns" in harvest time you'd see mechanical peanut diggers at work in one field, hitched to modern tractors, and in the next field perhaps there'd be a plow dragged by mule power turning up the peanuts. The vines look just like pea-vines, and when the peanuts come out of the soil, especially if it's sandy soil, they look something like silk cocoons, creamy white, and very smooth.

After the vines have dried a little they're gathered up into shocks and allowed to stand for some three weeks before they're threshed. Then the peanuts are hauled away to the mill for the final processes of sorting, grading and shelling.

Even the animals are interested in the peanut harvest. The mules do their best to snatch a mouthful. And just let a pig get loose! He's off for the nearest peanut field at a gallop. Sometimes you'll pass a field where the nuts have been threshed and find it full of turkeys, peering around for stray peanuts where the vines have been stacked. They'll find enough cracked hulls to make their search worth while.

Talking about pigs and peanuts, reminds me of a delicious dish, the recipe for which I am going to give you now. It is one of George Receptor's favorites.

Ham Baked With Peanut Butter

Have a slice of ham cut about an inch thick. Place the meat in a baking dish, rub with brown sugar, and spread with peanut butter which has been softened with milk or cream. Cover with fine dry bread crumbs. Surround the meat with milk or fruit juice and bake in a moderate oven (325°F.) for about an hour and a half or until tender.

Vicks Makes Special Offer To Every Antiseptic User

Makes Possible, At Small Cost, Test of the New Vicks Mouthwash and Gargle — For Halitosis, Oral Hygiene and Other Antiseptic Uses

Local Druggists Have Limited Supply of a Special Trial Size — A 25c Value for Only 10c.

Users of mouth-washes, gargles, and antiseptic lotions can now save more than half the costs of this modern daily necessity. This tremendous saving comes with the introduction of the new Vicks Vorozone Antiseptic by the makers of Vicks VapoRub.

That all antiseptic users may test for themselves its quality — and its economy — the makers have supplied druggists with five million bottles of a special trial size at less than cost. This is a 25c value, but is priced at only 10c, while the supply lasts.

Born in a depression year, Vicks Antiseptic is priced accordingly. The regular size is a large 10-ounce bottle — a usual 75c value — priced at only 35c. This new low price level is made possible by record low prices of raw materials — combined with Vicks mass production and world-wide distribution of quality products.

Mild Enough, Strong Enough
Vicks Vorozone is a balanced antiseptic. Mild enough to use daily without risk to delicate membranes. Strong enough to do everything an oral antiseptic can and should do. Vicks Chemists could produce nothing better . . . and they were aided by the chemists, pharmacologists, and bacteriologists of their 16 allied organizations, here and abroad.

Vicks Antiseptic is designed, of course, for all the customary uses of an oral antiseptic. The most convincing evidence of its quality and savings is to get a trial size of Vicks Vorozone, and use this generous quantity in the usual way. Your druggist has it. Get a bottle today for each member of your family who uses an antiseptic mouth-wash, gargle or lotion. — (Adv.)

Contrasts at Beaux Arts Ball

Here are two of the striking costumes worn at the annual Beaux Arts Ball, held recently in New York, showing the wide range covered by the masqueraders in the matter of attire. The colorful event called for an imaginative world cruise during which the liner stopped at the leading ports of the world. At these stoppages tableaux were presented wherein the national costumes of that particular country were displayed. At left above, Arman Archibald enacts the role of a Fiji warrior, complete with war mask. In sharp contrast is the costume of Isabel Ryan (right), which is supposed to be what one sees on a trip through the "Bazaars of Istanbul."

CURLEY CONTINUES HUNT FOR LEWIS' OPPONENT

Promoter Dick Curley Friday night will continue his drive for an opponent for Ed "Strangler" Lewis by presenting Jim Browning-Steve Znoski in the feature match at the Arena.

Lewis has contracted with Curley to meet any opponent selected for him and the winners of bouts the past few shows will have one of their number as the contender when Lewis defends his title at the Arena February 3rd.

The Strangler has beaten all the accepted challengers, beaten them so decisively in fact, that the wrestling followers are beginning to wonder if there is anyone capable of downing the veteran, who has held the title three times.

Browning and Znoski are top-notch wrestlers and neither ever had a crack at Lewis' crown. Browning has gone along winning consistently but has never been given any unusual attention. His specialty is a looping airplane scissors. Recently he was put to the test in a match with Sammy Stein who has beaten all but Lewis, Shikat and Sherry. Stein's celebrated tackle meant nothing and Browning scored an easy victory in 31 minutes.

Znoski, an ex-rider College athlete, has had a spotted career in the mat game. He rose sensationally to the top and then started to slide. He demonstrated that he is regaining his former effectiveness when he held George Manich to a bristling draw.

The Masked Marvel, who kept his identity intact by grappling to a draw with the "Red Devil" again endangers his unknown standing by facing the Flying Hollander, Henry Piers, in another finish encounter.

Piers has developed a fine following in his last four appearances here. He and Century Miltstead engaged in a thrilling contest last week and only Piers' greater experience enabled him to down Miltstead.

The "Red Devil" and Joe Shimkus, burly Lithuanian, are slated to come to grips in a thirty-minute set-to. Before the scarlet-caped would accept terms to grapple again at the Arena, he demanded assurance that he would receive ample police protection. His crowd-baiting manager has antagonized the crowds and he fears the consequences of the irate fans.

Marin Plestina, versatile Jugo-Slav arm-bender, and the ever-popular Century Miltstead, engage in a 30-minute tussle.

DO YOU KNOW . . . that "Fungy" Missera, who played third base for the St. Ann's baseball team five years ago, and the comedian of the twilight league at the time, is now working for the Philadelphia Electric Company . . . Missera was very popular with the fans, pulling many mirth-provoking stunts . . . a regular Nick Altrock.

Young Harry Crosby, the promising young Bristol boxer, met with a set-back last Monday evening in the Trenton "palace of punch" . . . he was matched with a Philadelphia scrapper named McShea, who proved to have entirely too much experience for the game little Bristol lad.

PENN STATE PLANS FOR BOXING TOURNEY SOON

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Jan. 25.—(INS)—Penn State again will be host to an annual tournament of collegiate boxing. Boxers from the present Eastern Intercollegiate Association, the Southern Conference, the New England States, and a few institutions in the Middle West will be matched here March 17 and 18.

These at least, are the present plans. Institutions in these sections are being approached and if the response is sufficiently encouraging the tournament will be held. Penn State athletic officials announced.

In the event that there is not sufficient interest in such a tournament, the regular Eastern Association eliminations will be held instead.

KILLS TWO AND SELF

Erie, Jan. 25.—Ending an argument which had lasted most of the night, John J. Schaffer, 64, today shot and killed his wife and daughter in a bedroom of their home here and then committed suicide. The victims were: Mrs. Martha Schaffer, 53, and her daughter, Virginia, 21. Leonard Schaffer, 27, a son, was not hurt. He hurried into the bedroom but arrived too late to thwart the aged man. Police believe Schaffer and his wife argued last night over the sale of their home. Mrs. Schaffer finally retired with her daughter and this morning Schaffer pounded on the door and called out: "Are you going to live with me any more?" His wife replied "No." Schaffer broke down the door and fired four times with a shot gun. The first three shots killed his wife and the fourth took the life of his daughter. He then blew his own head off just as Leonard rushed into the room.

Gold Step Steps Into Gold

Mrs. H. S. Fairbanks' "Gold Step," with Jockey Gilbert up, is shown leaving the track at Hialeah Park, Miami, Fla., after he had turned in a surprise victory in the Inaugural Handicap of the annual meeting of the Miami Jockey Club. Some 12,000 spectators were on hand to see "Gold Step" step into the money. Inset is the lucky owner.

ATTEND BANQUET

Last evening was spent by Edgar Spencer, Madison street; Wesley Spencer, Monroe street; Samuel Shire, West Circle; and Harry Wilson, Bath street, at Elks Home, Philadelphia, attending the banquet followed by a salesmanship talk, given by the Kelvinator company.

Jawn at the Track

His first love—baseball—not being available at the moment, John J. McGraw, former manager of the New York Giants, turns to his second love—horse racing—for relaxation. The grand old man of the diamond is shown at Oriental Park, Havana, Cuba, as he watched the ponies on the opening day of the racing season.

"All are needed by each one"

.... NINETY-FOUR years ago industrialists were offering various remedies for ills confronting our nation; but it remained for a poet to give the soundest advice of his time . . . and for all time.

In February, 1839, one R. W. Emerson wrote a poem, and in a single thought pointed the way out of every national bewilderment down to the present time, "All are needed by each one. Nothing is good or fair alone." Prosperity in a nutshell!

Why not apply this formula Now! Give work to somebody . . . full time . . . part time or renovize time. When we all try to provide work for somebody else the aggregate influence will move mountains. No slump can endure against united effort.

This company believes that normal living and steady working will return when leaders pull in one direction . . . forward!

I don't spend very much on Myself—

BUT, believe ME, when it comes to what I smoke, I want it right!

You know how it is when a fellow is accustomed to smoking a good cigarette and he gets hold of one that isn't right. He's likely to get in a bad humor.

I am a great believer in the old saying that "quality will tell," and I have noticed that the things which come to stay are good things.

You can buy a package of good cigarettes for 15c. Six cents of this goes to the Government. So that outside of the 6c paid to the Government, you get a little over two cigarettes for one cent.

The right kind of tobacco, the right sort of paper—a cigarette that's pure and good-tasting and mild—that's the kind I want.

I have been smoking CHESTERFIELDS for a long time. They are mild and yet they satisfy.
